

THE AUTHORS OF THE ISSUE ON NATIONALISM AND IDENTITY IN CROSS-NATIONAL PERSPECTIVE

Guest edited by CONSIRT, June 2013

KATARZYNA ANDREJUK, sociologist and lawyer, obtained her PhD in sociology from the University of Warsaw (2012). She currently works as Assistant Professor at the Institute of Philosophy and Sociology, Polish Academy of Sciences. Her Research interests include multiculturalism, Europeanization, migrations, and national and ethnic minorities.

CARMEN BUZEA obtained a doctorate in Sociology at the University of Bucharest with a dissertation on work motivation. Currently Carmen is implementing a postdoctoral grant on work motivation and work culture, financed by the Romanian National Authority for Scientific Research. Carmen is an Associate Professor in the Social Sciences and Communication Department of the Transylvania University of Brasov and coordinates the Communication and Social Innovation Research Centre, at the PRO-DD Research and Development Institute. Carmen published two books, one on work motivation and one on staffing, both in Romanian. Carmen is a project manager at a HR consulting company coordinating projects on work motivation assessment, organizational design and organizational development. Carmen's research interests are focused on human resource development, distributive justice and cross-cultural methodology.

RADOSVETA DIMITROVA received her PhD in Developmental Psychology at Trieste University, Italy with a dissertation on immigrant families, awarded the Best Doctoral Thesis by the Italian Psychological Association in 2009. Currently, Radosveta is completing a project on identity and acculturation of minority youth across Europe (most notably Roma) at Tilburg University in the Netherlands, for a second PhD in Cross-Cultural Psychology in 2013. Her current project received the 2012 Early Career Council Award of the Society for Research in Child Development (SRCD). Radosveta has international mobility experience as a research fellow at the Brent Centre for Young People, London (UK), Brown University (USA) and ongoing collaborations in Europe, Asia, the USA, and Africa. Her areas of expertise regard cross-cultural psychology, immigration, identity and acculturation of ethnic minority groups. She is also editing a book on well-being of immigrant families across Europe, Africa, Asia, North and Central America currently in production at Springer. Additionally, Radosveta is actively involved in international professional service by organizing research activities and collaboration opportunities for young scholars as a representative of the Society for Research on Adolescence (SRA) Study Group Committee and the Society for the Study of Human Development (SSHD) Emerging Scholars Committee. She is also the secretary of the Early Researchers Union (ERU) of the European Association of Developmental Psychology (EADP), and a newly elected representative to the Ethnic & Racial Issues Committee at the SRCD – one of the leading international associations for developmental scientists.

JOSHUA KJERULF DUBROW received his PhD from The Ohio State University and is an Associate Professor at the Polish Academy of Sciences. He is Program Coordinator for Cross-National Studies: Interdisciplinary Research and Training Program (CONSIRT) and is Board member of RC 09, the Research Committee on Social Transformations and the Sociology of Development of the International Sociological Association. In his research on nationalism and identity, he co-edited the edited book, with Włodzimirz Wesolowski and Kazimierz M. Slomczynski, National and European? Polish Political Elite in Comparative Perspective (2010). His current research is on political inequality in cross-national perspective.

SIMONA GUGLIEMI earned a Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of Milan and a M.A. in Statistics from the University of Milano Bicocca. She is currently a Post-Doctoral Fellow at the Department of Political and Social Studies of the University of Milan. Her main research interests are in the relationship between collective identity, political culture and political system. Her most recent publications focus on conceptualizing and measuring national and European identity and on national and linguistic minorities. Methodological interests include comparative studies and cross-national equivalence. She has expertise in the collection and management of survey data and statistical analysis.

VENZISLAV JORDANOV received his PhD in Sports Psychology at the Bulgarian National Sports Academy, Department of Psychology, Pedagogy and Sociology in 2012. Currently he is a lecturer at the University for National and also at the International Economy and the National Sports Academy in Sofia. His main research interests revolve around the psychology of sports, work with developing young basketball players and cross-cultural psychology. In 2009, he joined the research team of Dr. Dimitrova and, since then, he has been actively involved in the study of identity, acculturation and wellbeing of youth and young adults in Bulgaria.

CAROLYN SMITH KELLER is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Keene State College. She received her Ph. D. from The Ohio State University in 2012. Her research and teaching focuses on stratification, political sociology and comparative methods. Her dissertation research analyzed attitudes towards marginalized groups in Europe. Her current research includes analyses of gender differences among political elites in the European Union as well as variation in voter turnout in industrialized countries. She is also working on a project analyzing state variation in marijuana legalization across the United States.

ROBERT M. KUNOVICH, Ph.D. is an Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Texas at Arlington (UTA), Associate Chair of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, and the Director of the Sociology Program. He conducts research in the areas of comparative race, ethnicity, and nation; political sociology; and social stratification and inequality. His research focuses on the public reception of immigrants as well as changes in social and political attitudes in Eastern Europe. He has published articles in journals, such as American Sociological Review, International Migration Review, and Social Forces. Professor Kunovich teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in research methodology and statistics as well as substantive courses in ethnic conflict and risk. He is the recipient of the 2012 College of Liberal Arts Outstanding Teacher Award and was inducted into UTA's Academy of Distinguished Teachers in 2013. Professor Kunovich is also an Associate Member of the Cross-national Studies: Interdisciplinary Research and Training Program (The Ohio State University and the Polish Academy of Sciences).

VANJA LJUJIC studied law at the University of Kragujevac (Serbia), from which she graduated in 1999. She received her Master's degree in international law (with specialization in human rights law) at the University of Utrecht in 2001. From 2002 until 2006 she worked at the Anne Frank House in Amsterdam, as a coordinator of a large educational project in the Balkans. From 2006 until 2011 she has been working on a Ph.D. project entitled Romaphobia among adolescents: the role of perceived threat, nationalism, and acculturation expectations at Leiden University. She is a member of the European Academic Network on Romani Studies. Her research interests include prejudice, perceived threat, nationalism, acculturation, political socialization and interethnic relationships.

SANDY MARQUART-PYATT is Associate Professor in Sociology and the Environmental Science and Policy Program at Michigan State University, USA. Her research and teaching areas of expertise are in comparative social change, environmental sociology, political sociology, and quantitative methods. Her current work focuses on identifying cross-national patterns on environmental and political attitudes and behaviors that include general concern for the environment, sustainability, national identity, democratic values, and participation.

JOHN MUELLER is the Ralph D. Mershon Senior Research Scientist at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies at The Ohio State University. He is also a Senior Fellow at the Cato Institute in Washington, DC. He is currently working on terrorism and particularly on the reactions (and costly over-reactions) it often inspires. His book, Terrorism, Security, and Money: Balancing the Risks, Benefits, and Costs of Homeland Security, co-written Mark Stewart, was published in 2011. Other books include War and Ideas: Selected Essays (2011); Atomic Obsession: Nuclear Alarmism from Hiroshima to Al Qaeda (2009); Overblown: How Politicians and the Terrorism Industry Inflate National Security Threats, and Why We Believe Them (2006); The Remnants of War (2004); Capitalism, Democracy, and Ralph's Pretty Good Grocery (2001); Policy and Opinion in the Gulf War (1994); Retreat from Doomsday: The Obsolescence of Major War (1989); War, Presidents and Public Opinion (1973) and Astaire Dancing (1985). Mueller has published hundreds of articles in journals, newspapers and blogs. He has been a visiting fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington, DC, the Hoover Institution at Stanford University, and the Norwegian Nobel Institute in Oslo. He has appeared on television on "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart," and "The National" on CBC, and on radio on "Marketplace," and "All Things Considered." He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, has been a John Simon Guggenheim Fellow, has received several teaching prizes, and in 2009 received the International Studies Association's Susan Strange Award that "recognizes a person whose singular intellect, assertiveness, and insight most challenge conventional wisdom and intellectual and organizational complacency in the international studies community."

IRINA TOMESCU-DUBROW received her PhD from The Ohio State University and is Associate Professor at the Institute of Philosophy and Sociology, Polish Academy of Sciences (PAN) and Program Manager for Cross-National Studies: Interdisciplinary Research and Training Program – CONSIRT of the Ohio State University and PAN. Her research is on social stratification, structural change, and cross-national methodology.

PAOLO SEGATTI is Full Professor of Political Sociology at the Università degli Studi di Milano (Italy). He is co-founder and President of Itanes (Italian National Election Study). He is also vice-chair of True European Voter Cost action (chair Prof. Hermann Schmitt). He published several books and articles on comparative electoral behavior, political culture and national identity, among them he edited (with Paolo Bellucci) a volume on the Italian electoral change in the last forty years (Votare in Italia, 1968-2008, Il Mulino, Bologna, 2010).

KAZIMIERZ M. SŁOMCZYŃSKI is Director of the Cross-National Studies: Interdisciplinary Research and Training Program (CONSIRT), affiliated with the Institute of Philosophy and Sociology at the Polish Academy of Sciences and the Departments of Sociology and Political Science at The Ohio State University. His English-language publications include Social Structure and Mobility: Poland, Japan, and the United States (Warsaw: IFiS, 1989), Social Structure and Self-Direction: A Comparative Analysis of the United States and Poland (with Melvin Kohn; Cambridge: Blackwell, 1990, and subsequent editions in 1993 and 2007), Mental Adjustment to the Post-Communist System in Poland (with collaborators; Warsaw: IFiS, 1999), and Open for Business: The Persistent Entrepreneurial Class in Poland (with Elizabeth Osborn; Warsaw: IFiS, 2005). In 2010 he co-edited National and European? Polish Political Elite in Comparative Perspective (with Włodzimierz Wesolowski and Joshua K. Dubrow; Warsaw: IFiS; Polish edition, 2012). His recent articles appeared in Party Politics, International Journal of Sociology, Perspectives on European Politics and Societies, and other journals. He also edited three volumes containing analyses of the Polish Panel Survey (POLPAN) data, 1988-2008. Under his direction, the sixth wave of the panel study was conducted in May-June, 2013. Recently he received a grant from the (Polish) National Science Center on Democratic Values and Protest Behavior: Data Harmonization, Measurement Comparability, and Multi-Level Modeling in Cross-National Perspective.

THE AUTHORS OF THIS ISSUE

DOROTA WORONIECKA-KRZYŻANOWSKA is PhD student at the Polish Academy of Sciences. In her research, Dorota conducts extensive ethnographic fieldwork and combines anthropology with sociology to examine identity and meaning in daily life in societies marked by long-term conflict. She received her MA from the University of Warsaw; her thesis examined the role of sporting clubs in everyday life in Belfast, Ireland. Her dissertation examines social space and identity in a Palestinian refugee city-camp. Dorota has been a Visiting Study Fellow for the Refugee Studies Center at Oxford University and has received a grant for her PhD work from the Polish National Science Centre.

VALÉR VERES is associate professor, PhD at the Faculty of Sociology and Social Work, Babeş-Bolyai University Cluj-Napoca. He published on national identity and social stratification of Hungarian minorities in Transylvania and in Central and Eastern Europe, demographic evolution of the Hungarian minority population in Romania, youth studies in Romania. His present research was carried out within the Carpathian Panel Study, which investigated Hungarian minority populations and their relations with majoritarians and the Hungarians from Hungary in five CEE countries: Romania, Slovakia, Ukraine and Serbia.

THE AUTHORS OF THE METHODOLOGICAL FORUM

LÁSZLÓ LETENYEI, PhD, Habil., is associate professor at Corvinus University of Budapest, Institute of Sociology. He is working with mental mapping (www.mentalmap.org) social networks (www.socialnetworks.hu) and elastic survey (www.elasticsurvey.eu).

ELIZA BODOR-ERANUS received her PhD at Corvinus University of Budapest in 2013. She made researches related to local governments, social capital, key actors of social networks, information society, and elastic surveys. She is also working at S.C. Erromed S.R.L. as researcher from 2007.

GÁBOR DÁNIEL NAGY received his PhD from the University of Pécs and is assistant professor at the University of Szeged, Department for the Study of Religions. He is also chairperson of DARTKE Association, an NGO active in the field of social research and project planning. His main interests concern the topic of social capital and its intertwining with religion, and social network analysis of religious groups. He is a researcher and proponent of the elastic survey method.